

URGENT ISSUES TO BE DISCUSSED AT "Y" 40TH CONVENTION

(By Associated Press.)
Detroit, Mich., Nov. 6.—Many urgent issues are to be discussed at the 40th annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association which is to be held here November 19 to 21, according to the general officers of the organization. The gathering is expected to bring to Detroit upwards of 5,000 delegates, representing a membership of more than 1,000,000 men and boys and the association who served during the war in 43 countries. There will be a special session on the Canadian situation and the insular possessions.

Co-operation of the Young Women's Christian Association in assisting back into civil life the 4,800,000 men who served in the American forces during the war and the 500,000 who served in the Canadian forces for consideration, stabilization of labor, curbing discontent and unrest, extension of the Y. M. C. A. work, through the Y. M. C. A. work, and plans for world-wide expansion of the American Y. M. C. A. will also be discussed.

Official requests for extension of the association to many lands, including France, Italy, Siberia, Greece, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and elsewhere have been received. It is stated. The use of women in association work, particularly as secretaries, and related matters, are other questions to be placed before the convention by the three large commissions. The Y. M. C. A. has prepared to present definite recommendations.

The meeting, a triennial gathering, is declared by association officials to be the most important ever arranged by the Y. M. C. A.

ATHENA CLASS HAS IMMIGRANT PROGRAM

A vivid word picture of conditions in Russia was given by Mrs. E. A. Faust, before members of the Athena class at their meeting yesterday afternoon in library hall. She laid special stress on the capitulation of the Russian people to the invading armies of the German and Japanese.

The topic of study of the Athena class yesterday was that of immigration, and especially the Americanization of the immigrant. Mrs. E. A. Faust was the leader of the study program. She stated that ten millions of foreign people have come into the United States during the decade preceding the war. Many of these she said had drifted into the congested districts of the big cities, in charge of foreign consular bureaus, and had never assimilated American ideas.

Mrs. E. A. Faust also discussed the labor problem as connected with the immigrant, and said that there were several points to be considered in this relation. First, the increasing flow of immigrants to this country in normal times; second, the wasteful employment of labor, with its unequal distribution and its periods of idleness; third, the surplus of labor in this country; fourth, the unrest of the laborer, and his shifting from place to place.

NEWS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Sports that

Boys Like

By T. E. Jones
The University of Wisconsin
Any boy can acquire accuracy and fairly good distance in punting by practice and study of form. Care should be taken early in the season to avoid too much practice, as the leg is liable to become sore and dead from overwork.

Remember that the punt is the greatest and best play in football. Accuracy, distance, and height are the three essentials.

The spiral punt is the one to learn. In this method the ball goes end first reducing the friction, goes further, and is harder to catch.

Get a good swing from the hip, straight let, toe pointed. Emphasize height so that the ends will have time to cover the receiver.

The center should aim to pass the ball at the punter's waist. The ball should be kicked well out from the body. There are two methods used:

1. On receiving the ball, the punter should be 10 or 12 yards back of the center, should receive the ball at the waist. Step back, then step backward with the left foot, then take a long step with the left for a kick.

2. A short step with the right, then a long step with the left and kick. The long step with the right is necessary to get a powerful kick.

The first method is the better as it is quicker and the kicker does not approach the defense.

Points in Competition
A study of wind conditions should be made. Punting with the wind, kick high to enable the ball to carry the ball further down the field. When against a strong wind, the ball should be driven low.

The punter should try to place the punt as far away from the best handler of punts as possible. He should regulate his punts in speed and height to suit the speed of the wind. It is well to punt the ball out of bounds when you can get the full distance.

WOMEN HEAR REPORTS OF DECATUR MEETING
A program of vocal selections was given yesterday afternoon at the meeting of the Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church held at the home of Mrs. P. M. Richards, Cherry street. About 40 women were present.

The program of the afternoon was in charge of Mrs. G. M. Townsend while Mrs. George Jacobs was the president of the organization.

Reports of the convention of the Northwestern branch of the Foreign Missionary societies held in October at Decatur, Ill., was the topic of discussion. Mrs. George Miller represented the children's work at this convention and gave an informal talk on the meetings in which she was most interested.

Mrs. Mary Clithero gave a general review of the convention with the list of speakers and so forth. Mrs. E. T. Richards represented the Standard Bearers at the convention, and is also conference secretary of children's work.

Mrs. L. J. Robb gave a general resume of the plans in missionary endeavor for the future, in which she outlined the goal set for the organization of the country.

A committee consisting of Mrs. P. P. Lewis, Mrs. J. M. Clarke, and Mrs. A. H. Hubbard was appointed to make plans for a Christmas meeting. Refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of the afternoon.

Rural School News

Junior Red Cross news will be published this year for the first time. The organization has a request has come to Supt. O. D. Antidell's office that schools turn in to the central department at Chicago, photographs, news items, and especially stories of bazaar and entertainments which were put on in the schools last year. Plans for this year's activities will also be published. The articles must be sent into the central division before Nov. 10.

The Misses Harriet Bill and Jennie Dean, supervising teachers, are attending the teachers' convention at Milwaukee.

C. P. Fossum, Orono, Wis., was a visitor at the county superintendent's office today.

One free copy of the Junior Red Cross news will be sent to every teacher in the rural schools. If additional copies are desired, teachers should write for them to the chairman of the Junior Red Cross in the schools.

A banner made of red felt has been presented to the Cox school, Fulton, as a prize for doing 100 per cent in the arithmetic health grade which was put on the schools last year. Miss Myrtle Phillips is the teacher.

The Hubbel school, Fulton, has been closed for a few days. Miss Nellie Gillispie of this city is the teacher.

An Evening of Mind-Reading

By Mollie Price Cook
A raw November evening! Bustled and excited! The family gathered in the living room! Mother mending hand; father's comfy things placed where he can reach them!

Get an accomplice—your sister or a friend. Fix a turban or band around her forehead. Announce your entrance to the living room by clapping your hands. Then introduce "Madam Baliboo, the great mystic mind-reader." "Madam Baliboo has just come from India, where she has learned to use her wonderful natural powers of mind reading from the magic of the Orient. Madam can read your minds and tell your innermost secrets. She will now leave the room while you pick out some object on which to rivet your thought. She will tell you what it is when she returns."

Get the family to decide upon something in the room. Ask them all to concentrate upon it and think of nothing else.

Call Madam Baliboo and question her about the object in any way you please. Point to different things, saying: "Is it this? Is it that? Are these people thinking of this book? Of anything on the table, etc.?" Madam will answer "No." But when

Three hundred women from Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin have been invited to attend a conference given by the central field committee of the Young Women's Christian Association in Chicago, Nov. 6 and 7.

The objective of the conference, the foreign advance educational program, will be introduced by Mrs. Edgar J. Goodspeed, chairman of the finance committee for the central field. Mrs. Katherine W. Eddy, who was with the party that accompanied the 123 secretaries who went on his evangelistic voyage to China, will tell of the Young Women's Christian Association in the Orient. The call to the association from the French government to help their women who were working in munition plants and army supply factories, and the great piece of work which was put on by the 123 secretaries who went to France, is to be told by Miss Harriet Taylor.

AMBITIOUS LEARN NEW TRADE TRICKS AT NIGHT SCHOOL

Upstairs and down in the high and vocational schools amateur captains of industry ply their many trades at the night school, two evenings of the week.

In the typewriting department the hesitating, labored clicking machines manned by novices is heard, minor, minor, until a perfect copy is made. Many clerks who desire to advance, practice fit themselves for stenographic work, are enrolled in these two classes.

Obvious looking clerks armed with rulers, sharply pointed pencils, and erasers, toll over red lined accounts. Bookkeeping and commercial arithmetic are taught in this department.

Shorthand is Deciphered
Seated at a long table like diplomats at a conference, the shorthand students are deciphering a sentence which translated reads "Henry Clay would not make the treaty." They are directed by the instructor to write the next sentence in shorthand, remembering of course, that capitalization marks must be made for Ellen Terry.

Mysteries of the gas engine world were being explained to a class of young men in the Lincoln school. Magneto, valve, and a cylinder full of gas, the subjects with which the young men were fascinated.

Across the hall, ingenious workers toiled with a car, wiring, tuning.

and attaching a transmission case. The three women of the class stood close by eager to master the intricate workings of automobile machinery.

Learn to Be Draftsmen
Triangular rulers, compasses, and 45 degree celluloid triangles were the tools of the mechanical drawing class. Young men from machine shops and those who would become draftsmen work at architectural machine, and shop sketching. Some drew geometrical appearing plans from books, while the skilled workers used objects such as pulleys for their models.

On to the land of possibilities—for there are so many possibilities in making over old clothes, say the teachers. Two dressmaking classes have been established.

Clothes Made Over
"Bring anything that you want to sew on, we help you plan and fit your dresses," is the slogan of the dressmakers. As a result some little girl is going to have an almost new blue cape trimmed with bright red braid, a black crepe meteoric creation will appear soon which will not be recognized by the most scrutinizing as a made over. Waists, petticoats, bags, lingerie, all the whims of woman's vanity are being catered to in these classes.

HELPING THE FOREIGN-BORN.
One of the important New York newspapers recently published an editorial in which it reminded Gary and others like him that the foreign-born, now so much blamed for labor troubles, were imported in droves a few years ago by big employers to work in steel mills and mines, because they would take less money than native Americans. A few days later the same paper published the following letter under the caption: "The Plea of a Good American":
To the Editor: In a morning of 22d this month I did read the Editorial page 14 article of: Blaming the Foreign-Born.
(I am a foreigner and you judge yourself because you see the text of my writing.)
When I did read this article I started cry. This all is truth what you write. I and hundreds of thousands of us are against this system (bohevisim) but what can I do. I am the tool in some body hands. I read only my foreign papers because I do not understand English. I am laborer not educated but my heart and soul is with you Dear American. I keep my self away because you laugh of me and ignore me.
But try to understand me and open my heart and you will see there is no falsehood but really love to you, but you never look inside, you look only outside.
I appeal to really American Patriots to help me and all of us foreigners to learn and give me the idea how to be a good American.
Do not be discouraged, this is not to late, is right time now, and I am sure you will have a good result—
Your well-wishing Alexander Dombrowski.

This letter is enlightening. The foreign laborer comes to America on the representation of industrial agents that he will find in the New World a veritable Eldorado, a place where he can earn money easily and rapidly, while enjoying the advantages of liberty and social equality. His new home really is better than the one he left. In most cases, he draws better pay. But he is a stranger, and feels ill at ease. Customs are different, and the road to advancement is not as easy as he thought. Often he becomes discouraged, and then he is ripe for the revolutionist agitator.
It is quite obvious that we have not cared enough or thought enough of assimilating and Americanizing the foreign-born, but have left it to the newcomers to fit themselves to our customs and ideas. The need for an Americanizing policy is apparent now. The first thing requisite is a sympathetic attitude toward those who feel awkward and out of place and unwanted among us.

MORE LIGHT ON THE CREEL COMMITTEE.
The investigator set at the task of "mopping up" the office of George Creel's committee on public information has brought to light new facts which more than confirm the general impression that Mr. Creel and his $6,000,000 propaganda effort were an elaborate and expensive mistake.

E. K. Ellsworth, appointed to liquidate the committee's affairs, has found stuffed away in file cases checks amounting to $76,000, drawn last spring in favor of the committee by various persons and concerns, on which collection was never attempted. Negotiable papers were found lying on the floor and in desk trays. Memoranda indicated that large sums of money had been handed out loosely to various persons for use in carrying on propaganda work, and that no accounting had ever been given for some of these disbursements. Evidently the activities of the bureau were carried on at the last in a most slovenly and unsystematic manner.
Mr. Creel's administration gives us another sample of what an idealistic uplifter can do when set at a task requiring some practical ability. Every newspaper man the country over knows that one of the chief functions of the committee was to load the mail with "press agent stuff," lauding the work of this or that individual or department. Most of this matter was thrown into waste baskets. We can only guess as to the benefits from Mr. Creel's press agent work in other countries. Possibly he did some good, but the American army and navy achieved a million times as much in winning admiration and respect for our country and its disinterested purposes.

It is too late now to cry over the milk that Mr. Creel spilled, but his case at least may yield something of profit by indicating to future presidents how not to conduct publicity campaigns.

A REAL HERO.
That negro truck driver, who swerved aside his big truck to avoid striking a six year old white boy, and was killed as the result in Philadelphia recently, was no less a hero than many of those who wear the distinguished Service Cross as the result of war deeds today.

The negro had no time to stop his truck, so he swerved it to the curb and into a telephone pole. Behind him lumbered a huge street car, which in turn, couldn't stop, and plunged into the truck, crushing the negro between the truck and the steel telephone pole.
The little boy, cause of the accident, escaped unhurt.
Of such heroic deeds is the veritable life of the city made up. Every day some little deed, unsung and unheard of by the people, shows that the day of chivalry, the day of honor and of love isn't over. Romance is not dead. But usually, it takes an O. Henry, to bring it to the attention of the world.

All the heroes didn't fight in the Argonne nor wear the khaki. Some of them couldn't have passed an army physical examination, but are the commonplaces, every day heroes nevertheless.

UNMILITARY.
The statement of a member of the senate, in connection with the bill for compulsory education of aliens in Americanism and the natives who have been neglected, that there are 8,000,000 illiterates over 10 years of age in this country should arouse to action.
All these are "unmilitated" from the standpoint of our "Melting Pot" that is expected to make one people out of many. They never will be melted until they have been taught the language that is the common medium of communication in this country.

The mention of "native illiterates" should fill every American with shame. Since every child has a right to be educated, it follows that it is cheated wherever this is denied. Cheating the children is one of the greatest of crimes. It also is a source of weakness to any country.
Thus we see the Americanization that has to be done among many of the native-born as well as among those of foreign birth. Either Americans must teach these,

THE PLAYFUL YEARS
How little we know in the glad old days when life was a round of play.
Of the many cares and the many griefs that were hidden along the way!
Oh, we wondered oft why the mother sighed and the father's face was sad,
But they shielded us in our boyhood years from every care they had.

We woke each morn to a care-free day, full sure of the joy we'd planned,
And the fluttering crepe on a neighbor's door we never could understand;
There was no such thing as the pain of death in our glorious lives back then,
For we were sheltered from every care that comes to the hearts of men.

We never grieved as the mother did when sorrowful news came in,
Though we wondered at tears which filled her eyes and noted her trembling chin;
She whispered of some one about to die and kissed us and went away,
But we never knew what it really meant and it never disturbed our play.

We asked for things and we got them, too, nor thought of the money spent,
We never learned in those early days the sacrifice they meant;
We knew that the father went to work and was weary and worn at night,
But always the cares that he bore for us were hidden away from sight.

And now we stand to the griefs of life, and now we have come to know
Why the crepe is placed on a neighbor's door and the hurt and the ache of woe.
And we hide our grief as our parents did and we try to check our tears,
So that never a care shall our children know to the end of their playful years.

Their Opinions

Again the federal trade commission is wailing like a cat on the garden fence about the packers. This country has something real to worry about as is being revealed in the raids on red agitators in the Gary vicinity and men of the class this commission is made of, are very helpful allies of the radical revolutionaries.—Wausau Record-Herald.

It is now proposed in a law to place the interstate commerce commission in charge of all ocean trade, just as in the case of the railroads. As this commission badly strangled the railroads before the war began, if the law passes, the country may expect to see a finished job out of what the Seaman's law did leave. Let us have an end of this foolishness and leave our ocean trade alone.—Racine Journal-News.

The director of the Riverside high school at Wauwau is credited as declaring that the "historic American revolution is written with prejudice." This agrees with those who would involve our country inextricably with foreign countries, and as well use our flesh and blood to settle for other people's what they should settle themselves.—Racine Journal-News.

Advertising and Unrest

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—Advertising played a tremendously important part in winning the war. Can it be relied upon now to help us out of our industrial crisis?
The advertising man thinks it can. They believe that, systematically and properly applied, advertising can bring about a state of cordial co-operation between employers and employees; that it can prevent strikes and increase production. At any rate, they are going to try it, and see what happens.
"You know what we did in the war, don't you?" inquired an advertising genius the other day, in discussing the new mission of his profession.
"Why, whenever we needed German prisoners for information about the enemy's locations, my dear fellow, we advertised for them. And we got them, in spite of the fact that the Germans had circulated rumors that German prisoners were killed by Americans. Our advertising men at the front merely had the American mess men repeat the rumor, because as soon as they came into camp they would inquire about the food advertised."
Going to try it on strikers.
"Well, if you would think up something equally clever to get the men who are on a strike back in our plant," said a Massachusetts business man who had joined the group.
"We will," replied the advertising expert confidently. "We will." "While the business men are a bit dubious as to the results of advertising as a means of maintaining industrial harmony within their shops, large commercial concerns now have their so-called 'house organ,' a magazine which plays up the interesting details of the business and does not show any favoritism to either side in its cooperation between employer and employee. This is an advertising feature based upon the same idea as John Wanamaker's personal ad in the daily newspapers.
In nearly every factory now, more over, the walls are adorned with placards and posters. But these placards are no longer posters. They are the duty of the 'employees' towards the firm; instead the most conspicuous ones deal with the firm's attitude towards its duty towards them. At the end there is always a snappy statement about team work for the benefit of the public and the country. The advertising is plain and simple. The employers are advertising themselves as zealously in this fashion as they do talcum powder.

Moving Pictures Are Latest
But the latest thing in industrial advertising is the moving picture. This usually consists of several reels, showing every detail which occurs in the manufacture of a product, from its design to its sale to the consumer. This is one of the most valuable advertising mediums yet invented, for it shows each employee just how much he contributes to the service not only of his firm but of his country. Every man works day in and day out for months at a time on a single process, it is often difficult for him to see this, without the help of a movie.
The story is told by one advertising man of an employee in a New England plant who did nothing all day long but punch steel discs which were brought to him on a moving platform. It was during the war, and the man's son was in the trenches. He did not find steel discs very much interesting, but it was a practical way of earning a living. Then one night the employees were invited to see a moving picture show in the plant. The picture was of a battle scene. The man saw his steel disc carried on to the next workers and then the next until finally it was shown fitted in its place in a machine gun. The man was taken to the port of embarkation, set across the Atlantic and up to the front line trenches, where he saw his machine gun being fired. He was so interested that he had it handled. This man returned to his job with a new zest for steel discs that greatly increased his efficiency.

Ducks Are Plentiful.
Ashland.—Not in years have there been so many ducks in the sloughs and streams of the upper lake country as there have been during the past few days. The storms of the past couple of weeks have driven the water fowl from the north and from the Dakota prairies to the lake region. The Kalamazoo sloughs near Ashland are literally black with ducks, mostly blue bills. The Indians go after them in small boats and down Bad river and among the adjacent swamps and return with boats well filled.

Say, kid, I've gotta admit it's chic.
The cutest thing I've seen in a week.
But then it's not what a Pure Guy could without shame.
Around by his own dame.
In Boston.
Kiddo, that is where my firm Locates, in modesty.
The folk declare we lead the race.
Even the plain lady you'll see in chiffon.
Dressed below the knee.
In Boston.
Kiddo, the statue nude.
Pilis us.
With shame, Aphrodite's rude.
You ain't The same, no you can't understand.
By gee! Our old Bostonian Modesty.
If I just took it as a skirt.
Across the foam to the U. S. A.
The dames at home, rather than wear a skirt.
That cute little gown, would throw the whole darn business down.
A buyer, kiddo; no, I'd get The sack.
In Boston no nice dame will show.
Her whole bare back, nor would she wear.
A skirt like these. She likes To reach her knees. Our Modesty's.
So high, so pure, from blot to blot.
No Boston dame could e'er endure.
Its injury. No, kid, their Prudish.
Score! I fear, besides These gowns.
Are far too dear.
Be of good cheer. There are a lot of conductors who will never strike—the columbia conductors.
The law allows a married man to make wine. Now watch for a rush at the marriage license counter.
It beats all how prompt the mails are on the first of the month.
IT DOESN'T RHYME, BUT THE IDEA IS FASCINATING.
Dear Roy, why praise of Eloise in Vers Libre, so enchantingly? Why write of limbs but not of trees.
That make us sigh romantically. With little so bare in winter's breeze.
Though they charm ecstatically. Your little mind may surely freeze. Unless she dresses more practically.—N. F. K.
One advantage of a mild autumn like this is the opportunity to buy coal and feed at the same time.
Cheer up! Christmas is coming.

ROMANY MARIE'S.
Romany Marie's is in Greenwicks Village, but there are no directions for finding it. The streets down there become as erratic as the villages and ramble about at will. Eleventh street crosses Fourth in one place—an acrobatic feat worthy of a Boston street. But if you wait until every other little weird eating place is closed, and all the quaint, brightly curtained windows are dim, and then go down a street near Sheridans square, you will come to Romany Marie's. It would be even better if you could find it at dinner time, for strange and deliciously cooked Roumanian dishes are served to the lucky few who discover this place.

The small room is furnished with a few bare wooden tables and benches, and dimly lighted by candles. There are samples of Roumanian crafts hanging on the walls. Movie herself, stepping in and out in straw slippers and a sort of nondescript costume, takes your order, cooks your food, and serves it. It is a place to go to if you want to eat, or a place to go if you want to feel out of the world and alone.

It is pleasant to linger over your coffee and cigarette in a dim corner at Romany Marie's to remember deliciously the dinner you have just eaten, and to watch idly the shadowy groups at other tables-looking in the dimly lit room like candlelight like charcoal drawings.

You realize then that Romany Marie is not the least important artist in Greenwicks Village, and one of the most important when it comes to creating atmosphere and things to eat.

News Notes From Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Carroll McCormack, recognized as one of the leading actresses of the spoken stage, has answered the call of the silent drama and has signed a contract with Famous Players-Lasky for a leading woman in the forthcoming production of "Jack Straw," in which Robert Warwick will star under the direction of William C. DeMille.

Though Miss McCormack has been besieged with offers from motion picture producers in the past, she steadfastly refused to give up or interrupt her stage career and officials of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation deem themselves fortunate in including her to make her bow in Shadowland in Paramount-Artcraft pictures.

Miss McCormack is a Los Angeles girl and daughter of the late Judge Charles Carroll McCormack, a celebrated jurist. Her first professional appearance was as a whistler on the Orpheum circuit. Her rise to fame came when she was cast in the role of Eddie Lyons and she has scored triumph after triumph, not only as a dramatic actress, but also as a star in musical comedies.

Most of Miss McCormack's stage work has been done on Broadway, New York. She was with Charles Frohman for five seasons, scoring her first announced success in "The Dollar Princess." She was with John Drew in "Single Man" and in David Belasco's "Seven Chances." "Oh, Lady," a musical comedy, was an individual triumph for her.

She did "The Walk, Offs" on Broadway and then left for overseas, where for six months she gave three performances a day entertaining Uncle Sam's fighting men. She returned to her home the last day of July and was ready to leave for New York to take up her stage career again when Famous Players-Lasky won her over to motion pictures.

In Japan recently, Miss Walcamp is the star of the company going to the Orient to make a serial and Mr. Tucker is her leading man. They first met at the Universal studio the week before they sailed.

HISTORY
Did you know that Priscilla Dean and Marie Walcamp started their careers in films with those two comedians, Eddie Lyons and Leo Moran?

Rhodes, Victoria Forde, Junia Hanson, Edna Aug and Rosemary They were some of the stars who began in Lyons-Moran comedies.

ANOTHER AIR DEVOTEE
Louise Huff loves to go up in the air. This is not said in the slang sense, but because the little star went flying down at Mancello the other day to get some scenes for the feature she is now making.

Miss Huff, who is a devotee of motor boating, now says that flying is even more exciting than speeding over the water.

MARRIED IN JAPAN
A romance which budded on the Pacific, culminated in the wedding of Marie Walcamp and Harland Tucker.

WHO'S WHO

in the Daily News

GUSTAV NOSKE

Gustav Noske, Germany's man of iron, is expected to leave for Berlin today to take up his duties as minister of defense.

Noske is indeed a strong man. Some look on him as "the man on horseback," the coming ruler of Germany. Maxmillian Harden significantly calls Berlin "Noskow."

There is no magnetism about his personality. He is rather uncouth and on first acquaintance "offensively defensive."

It has been said, "But," as one writer describes him, "he exudes strength and has the instinctive advantage of knowing his own mind. Likewise he is loyal."

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am in love with a fellow and went with him one year. He is not good for me, although he still likes me.

He used to come to see me off and on and promises to come now and seems to be very busy. Of course he goes with other girls and just gives me some of his spare time.

It does me good to see him and no matter how short his stay, I am satisfied. I have him on my mind all the time and wherever I go I look for him.

What would you advise me to do? Would it be proper to write to him? He told me to call him up. Shall I?

The young man may like you, but he is far from being in love with you. Do not write him, call him up, or even ask him to come to see you. He may be busy, but he has time for you if he were deeply interested in you.

If there is one thing a man dislikes, it is to be pursued by a girl. Be very careful not to do this or to let him know how much you care for him.

It is unwise for you to give him so much trouble, since it is evident he does not think of you. Try to take an interest in others.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married ten years and have lived with my husband's people for years. I have been married. None of them seem to like me, although I try every way to please them.

I have tried to get my husband to move, but he will not, and I have no one else. Father and mother died when I was a young girl.

When I married I loved my husband dearly. We were married long before he started to go with other women. That almost broke my heart, but I stayed with him. He is a decent fellow, but last year another woman came between us. He is with her all the time and never takes me anywhere.

EVERYDAY HELPS

By GRANDMOTHER WELLS

When planning meals for children, between the ages of three to six years, it should be remembered that the most important article of their food is milk. If needed, milk should be given in a pint of milk a day. Very small children need more than this.

There are many different ways of serving the milk, to make it attractive. Disguised in cocoa, cream soups, puddings, and custards, it will always be welcomed by the children.

Bread and milk may be the chief dish at supper time. If the milk is not very rich, the bread should be spread with butter. Vary the dish by using toast sometimes or cracker. At least once a day, serve a cooked cereal with milk or cream poured over it plentifully. If so desired, any cereal may be cooked in milk instead of water. Rice, simmered slowly in a double boiler or in a covered pan in a slow oven, can absorb six times its quantity in milk.

Serve milk toast frequently. To make it the easiest way, put on the

I am a good housekeeper, keep myself nice and clean and have a lot of friends. I am at a loss what to do. THANK YOU.

You mentioned no children in your letter and, therefore, take it for granted that you have none. Your husband probably loves you more than any other woman, but is not waken to the fact. Tell him that you are not going to remain in his mother's home any longer. Ask him to provide a home for you somewhere else. He will refuse at first, but if he sees you are determined to leave, I believe he will do this for you.

In case you find he no longer loves you, probably you will be happier to go to work and live somewhere else. Separation from you may teach him that he still loves you. If it does not, however, you will be happier alone than to remain in a home where you are ill-treated.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man and I am in love with two girls. One is a pearl of a girl, kind and sweet all the time, while the other gets angry easily and is very temperamental. The first one is slim, while the other one is inclined to be fat.

I have got to decide between the two, because they are both jealous of each other. I am not sure of the love of the first one, but the second one has told me many times that she likes me.

Should I continue to go with both of them? SKINNER.

If a young man wants his love affairs to run smoothly, he should be careful to have the objects of his affection geographically separated. I should think you could continue to go with both of the girls if you are careful to have them separated. It is one while in the presence of the other.

If you decide to make a choice, I cannot advise you. You alone can tell which one means more to you.

Household Hints

MENU HINT.

Breakfast. Steamed Prunes. Top Milk. Toast or Muffins. Luncheon. Pearl Barley Soup with Cabbage. Toast Strips. Date and Raisin Salad. Tea. Chocolate Bread Pudding. Dinner. Codfish and Potato Omelet. Boiled Turnips and Potato Salad. Nut Bread and Butter. Apple Trifle.

RECIPES FOR A DAY.

Pearl Barley Soup with Cabbage—Two tablespoons barley, one and one-half quarts water, one-eighth pound butter, very small head of cabbage, three small green onions, one cup milk. Soak the barley in the water for six hours or over night. Put bacon through food chopper, cut cabbage and onions rather fine and add all three to the boiling barley and water. Simmer for one hour. Just before serving add the milk, salted, with salt and pepper. Other vegetables (left overs) may be used instead of the cabbage. Bake and Apple Sauce—Two cups diced apples, one cup chopped dates. Mix with golden dressing. Dressing—Two eggs, beat slightly, add one-quarter cup fruit juice (orange, apple or pineapple), one-quarter cup oil, one-quarter cup lemon juice. Stir constantly in a double boiler until it begins to thicken. Cool and serve on any kind of biscuits.

Squash Biscuits—One-half cup steamed and strained squash, one-fourth cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup cold milk, one-half cup cold water, one-half cup oil, one-half cup butter, one-half cup sugar, salt and fat to milk; when lukewarm add dissolved yeast cake and flour; cover and let rise over night. In the morning shape into biscuits, let rise and bake. Steamed Winter Squash—Unless it is very dry it is much better steamed than boiled. Cut the squash into pieces, remove seeds and stringy portion and par. Place in a strainer, and cook thirty minutes or until soft, over boiling water. Mash and season with butter, salt and pepper. If lacking in sweetness add a small quantity of sugar.

SWEETS.

White Cookies—Two eggs, one and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup shortening, one-half cup sour milk or buttermilk, one teaspoon soda, one-half cup baking powder, a little salt. Thicken with flour. Roll out as soft as you can handle.

Soft Cookies—Two eggs, one cup molasses, one-half cup shortening (butter or lard), three-quarters cup buttermilk or sour milk, two teaspoons soda, one tablespoon oil, one and one-half cups flour, a little salt. Bake slowly.

Cheese Fruit Cake—One and one-half cups sugar (brown or white), one cup shortening (creamed), one and one-half cups buttermilk, one teaspoon allspice and cloves, three cups flour.

Bake in slow oven.

Date Pudding—One cup beef suet, chopped fine, one cup sour milk, one cup brown sugar, one egg, well beaten. Mix all together, into this fold one cup white flour and one cup granular sugar which have been sifted with one and one-half teaspoons soda. Into this stir one and one-half cups dates cut in small pieces. Add also one cup chopped walnut meats and a little salt.

Steam three hours.

Flour nuts and dates with a little of the measured flour before stirring them into the pudding.

BIG BERTHA SITE

Paris.—A bill has been introduced into the French Chamber for the purchase by the State of Crepusculum Wood, from which the first of the "Big Berthas" bombarded Paris.

REST AND EXERCISE IN LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA (5)

Only a small number of the many thousands of people infected each year with the spirochete ever develop locomotor ataxia, but it is fairly well established now that at least 90 per cent of all cases of locomotor ataxia are the result of such an infection, usually of several years' duration. There must be some additional or predisposing cause which renders one individual so infected susceptible to such involvement of the nervous system whereas another individual perhaps more heavily infected never suffers such an aftereffect. It is assumed by the masters of the subject that the spirochete may have a selective affinity for nervous tissue, in some strains; and there is clinical evidence to support this view. But a very frequent explanation of the vulnerability of the nervous system in one case and not in another is the standing nervous fatigue. There is convincing testimony to indicate that emotional stress, anxiety, about business, domestic stress, anxiety, worry, and other sins reduce the natural resistance of nervous tissue or cells to the invasion of the spirochete. It is rather common to find such a conception: Locomotor ataxia is ten times as frequent in men as in women. It occurs much more commonly in cities than in the country. It is rather common among negroes who are noted for their freedom from worry and depression.

The injurious emotions produce an effect on the cells of nervous tissue closely similar if not identical with the effect of ordinary physical fatigue. The individual with locomotor ataxia (or one with any nervous disease affecting muscle control, such as chorea—St. Vitus' Dance—or a tic—habit spasm)—is made worse by the depressing effects of nervous fatigue. It is rather common to find him in any way. This applies with particular force to the "Daddy Brady" who do for him that is too often (E. L. M.).

ANSWER—Simpson, it was often said, may be necessary. Night and morning rub into the scalp about a teaspoonful of a solution of resorcin, thirty grains, in alcohol water, four ounces (resorcin sometimes stains white or gray hair a yellowish tinge). QUEER KIND OF OCULITIS.

Kindly state the cause of floating specks before the eyes. When I have my eyes fitted in the summer I mention to the oculist, but he said it was due to kidney trouble. Would it be serious enough to consult a physician for such a trouble? WHITE EYES.

ANSWER—As a rule the trouble is not of serious import, but if you have diseased kidneys you certainly should consult a physician. Your oculist must have been a queer one for if an oculist is not a specialist in the eye, he usually refers the patient to a physician for attention. It doesn't sound like a bit like a serious matter like that.

Dear Miss Randolph: A lady whom I greatly admire is going to be married. I want to give her a present, but do not feel that I can afford anything expensive. Will you suggest something? BLUE EYES.

If you do embroidery, why not make something in handwork for your friend, such as a dress scarf, centerpiece, table runner, or something of that kind?

Dear Miss Randolph: A young man I met this summer at a vacation resort wrote me a card and asked me to answer it. I did so, but have received no reply from him. Do you think he does not want me to be friends? I like him very much, but do not want to appear forward. Should I write again? AGNES.

If you are sure you had his correct address, then you are reasonably sure that the card you sent him was delivered, for mail seldom goes astray. Wait a while longer at least. Perhaps he has been away from home. If he is really interested in you he will write again.

VELVET IS GAINING FORMER POPULARITY

Unusual velvet robe

Although tricot and duvelyn seem to be the favored materials for informal frocks, velvet and velveteen are making a comeback in the way of trimming in fact, it looks garish with much adorning.

This frock is one of the best reasons in existence for the renewed interest in velvets and velveteens. It is a veritable symphony in brown, combining richness, dignity and style. Made on straight narrow lines it employs tan satin in a novel way to relieve the somberness of the brown. The slashes on the blouse and the slashes on the skirt are a novel trimming which is the inspiration of Lady Duff Gordon. The flaring collar is faced with the satin and laces in the front and the same color idea is carried out in the dusty narrow belt.

The hat, too, is built on the same idea. It is of brown velvet with ribbons in existence for the renewed interest in velvets and velveteens. It is a veritable symphony in brown, combining richness, dignity and style. Made on straight narrow lines it employs tan satin in a novel way to relieve the somberness of the brown. MOON RIGHT FOR FISH

Lewistown, Pa.—The eel markets along the Juniata river are alive and wiggling with the prospects bright for two more weeks of good fishing. At the John Pennington camp, Pennington and two half-grown boys have taken 1,000 eels in two nights, the smallest of which average half a pound each, while the largest weighed five and one-half pounds. Other camps along the river made big hauls several nights in succession. The fishermen point out that the dark of the moon, a cold drizzling rain, the stream rising slowly at the wind blowing down the river form a combination sure to make good fishing.

Shurtleff's ICE CREAM

She Married an Average Man

By ZOE BECKLEY.

What does a woman do when this happens?

"Jim, dear, Athens says she won't take 'no' for an answer about her masked ball. Can't you recon sider your refusal like an adorable lamb and let's go and have a good time and forget business bothers?"

Silence for an entire minute while plume puffs continuously. "That."

"I don't wish to be disagreeable, Ann, but I am not going."

"Why not, Jimmie?"

"Because I don't like balls. I don't like Athens. I just don't like that crowd of near-highbrows and self-satisfied posers she runs with."

"But, Jim, darling, you've never met them. What makes you call them that?"

"I don't have to meet them. I know their kind. They're a lot of free thinkers and lovers and free."

"Jim! I won't have you speak of my friends like that. Mrs. Hast is as good a kind a woman as ever lived."

"My kind of friends is not women who live most of the time away from her husband and who schools young wives in rebellion."

"You know perfectly well, Jim, that you are mistaking things. Independence is not rebellion, and freedom in love is not free love. It is only when a woman is independent of all men that she can have freedom for marriage. That is what freedom in love means—freedom to love for love's sake and not for support."

(Silence for the space of three puffs. My husband was evidently thinking this over. Jim is not altogether indebt and interested. It is only that he has accepted his theories of life ready made, like his shoes.)

"These people change wives and husbands with the same nonchalance as they change their dwelling places. You told me yourself that the portrait painter you met at Mrs. Hast's is divorced and that the one who does pictures for magazines does not live with his wife and child."

"Which proves nothing at all," said I, "except that they were unhappy and utterly hampered in their work for themselves and their service to the world living together and happy, useful people separated. In some of the couples we used to know in Centerville had dissolved partnership instead of fighting together and having all sorts of scandals they would be more respectable, to my mind."

"Your mind, Ann, has undergone a great change since we came to New York."

"Yes, thank goodness, it has. I am proud to think I can grow. I would be ashamed, Jim, to hold the same views this year that I held 10 years ago. Especially when it comes to things I was asked to take on faith, like marriage, religion and politics, without using my intellect at all. Yes, dear, I have learned, and learned rapidly; and I have much yet to learn. One thing in particular is a problem to me."

"And what is that, may I ask?"

"Whether it is worth while trying to live my own life and losing my love and my home in the process," I answered slowly.

Jim sat still a moment without moving, then laid down his pipe and came over to my chair. "He said softly, kissing me, you've said it. Love and home are woman's dearest possessions. Nothing—not even work, not even brilliant friends—takes the place of them. Come, dear, be reasonable. Don't go to that Hast ball."

I said nothing. I am not happy. I wish I knew what to do. (To be continued.)
